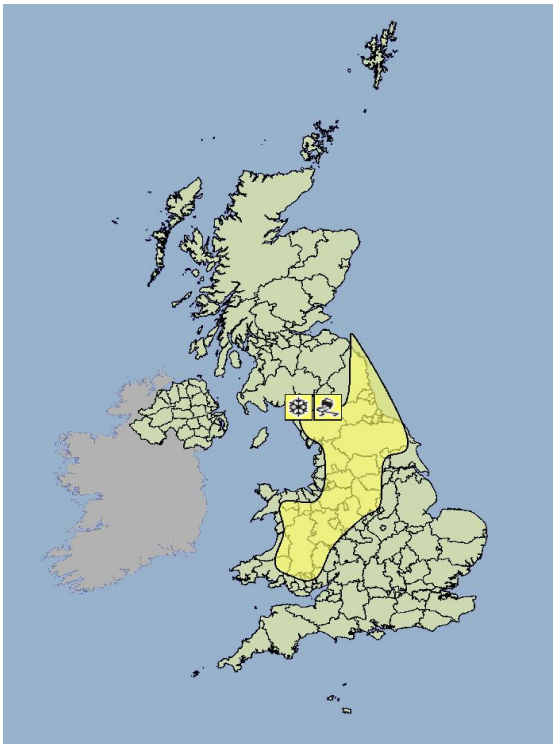
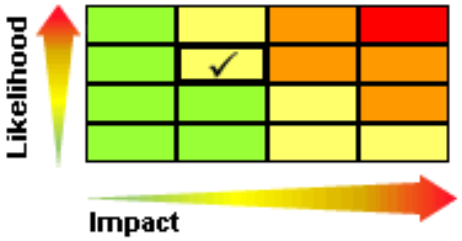
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
2-6 cm of snow may fall in places, especially on higher ground above 100-200m. A slushy cover of 1 or 2 cm seems more likely at lower levels and closer to the western coasts, some areas seeing very little or no snow. Some drifting may occur on cross-Pennine routes in the strong to gale winds.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Snow and Ice

Valid from 04:00 on Tue, 16th Jan 2018 until 11:00 on Wed, 17th Jan 2018

Showers will turn to sleet, snow and hail late on Monday night across northern England, and then affect parts of Wales and the Midlands Tuesday evening and overnight into Wednesday.

Delays to travel are possible, with a lower likelihood of cancellations of public transport. Some roads and pavements will turn icy, with an increased likelihood of some accidents and injuries.
